

Dr. Jeff Colyer

In 2018, Dr. Jeff Colyer joined Mid-America Orthopedics Kansas City. Dr. Colyer brings his extensive training and experience in Hand and Plastic Surgery to our range of specialties, with a focus on surgical repairs of the hand, plastics and craniofacial surgery.

Dr. Colyer grew up in Hays, KS. He attended the Georgetown University of Washington, DC, where he graduated with a Bachelors of Economics and Pre-Medicine. He earned his Masters of International Relations from Cambridge University in England and then achieved his Doctors of Medicine from the Kansas University Medical School. Dr. Colyer then completed his Residency of General Surgery from Washington Hospital Center in DC, and then came back to Kansas City to complete his Plastic Surgery Residency from University of Missouri. Following his residencies, Dr. Colyer completed Fellowship Training for Craniofacial Surgery at the International Craniofacial Institute in Dallas, TX.

Dr. Colyer's passion of community service and medicine has taken him to several war-ravaged countries where he's lent medical aid and was even featured on 60 Minutes: Scars of War. He's been named to several Top Plastic Surgeon Lists throughout his career and serves the next generation as a Surgical Instructor at multiple schools. Whether abroad or at home in Kansas with his wife and daughters, Dr. Colyer is committed to using his skills and training increase the confidence, health, and overall wellbeing of his patients.